

GreenNote

GreenNote was created to help students achieve their higher education dreams by empowering social networks for financial support to bridge the gaps not covered by traditional lending methods.

Using the GreenNote online platform, students connect with their social network - friends, family, friends of family, community leaders and others - to ask for financial support. In many cases this tends to come in the form of micro-donations but as traditional sources continue to diminish, larger commitments are being offered.

GreenNote is a higher education donor network that combines the attributes of traditional loan and scholarship programs with the power of a student's social network to bring new resources that help fill financial gaps when paying for college.

The program's unique features support students beyond just tuition, room and board – by matching them with friends, family, corporations, alumni and other members of their “community” that can directly help them pay for all the costs associated with going to college. With GreenNote, students can:

- Manage fundraising campaigns directly with their friends, family and members of their social network.
- Match their personal profile with criteria set by foundations, alumni groups, and other charitable organizations looking to make donations.
- Connect with institutions, corporations and other organizations offering low-cost and no-cost purpose driven loan options.

How It Works

1. Students set up online profile
2. They contact their social network - friends, family, etc... - all via email
3. They can integrate campaign with Facebook and other social websites
4. Individuals in their network agree to donate money for school.
